

Local News

Shoppers Turn to Farmers Market to Save

By

Rich Jones, News Director

@ October 13, 2008 7:15 AM Permalink | Comments \(1\)

The WOKV Money Wach is changing the way many of you are putting food on the table.

While many small and medium size businesses are struggling and investors are losing years of savings, first coast farmers are actually seeing a lot of green.

Mary Anne Evans has been selling fresh greens at the farmer's market near Beaver and Stockton for 25 years and says more and more of her customers are giving up traditional grocery stores.

In fact a few shoppers WOKV's Jared Halpern spoke with this weekend say they save 40 or 50 bucks a week, just on fresh fruits and vegetables.